

What is Dyslexia?

Shawna Audet

Widely Held Beliefs	My Thoughts	The Facts	Reflections on my teaching practice and/or district practices	Things that help/hinder change from happening
Learning to read, like learning to talk, is a natural process. With time, all kids will eventually, learn to read.
Dyslexia is genetic. Dyslexic kids can't be helped. They start at a disadvantage and can never catch up.
After grade 3, children are done learning how to read.
Children can learn to read by relying heavily on context cues.
Students can master reading comprehension if they just read a lot.
English has so many irregular spellings that is almost impossible to teach.				